17. Calculation of the Customer Portfolio Final Performance against the DBS CIO Barbell Portfolio:

- (a) For the purpose of return calculation, the initial portfolio value (“NAV_{SOP}”) is used as reference.
- (b) The final return of a portfolio in % is calculated by taking the difference between the Final Portfolio Value (“NAV_{EOP}”) and the Initial Portfolio Value (“NAV_{SOP}”), adjusted by the Net Cash Flow during the challenge period (“NCF”), and divided by the initial portfolio value. I.e.,
- $$\frac{NAV_{EOP} - NAV_{SOP} + NCF}{NAV_{SOP}} \times 100\%$$

where

- i) NAV_{EOP} is the Final Portfolio Value, or the NAV of the portfolio as of the end of the challenge period,
 - ii) NAV_{SOP} is the Initial Portfolio Value, or the value of the portfolio as of the start of the challenge period, and this should equal to the Initial Funding Amount,
 - iii) NCF is the net outflow as a result of both cash and security transfers outflow during the challenge period.
- (c) Illustration 1: If a portfolio is funded with USD 500,000, and ends the challenge with USD 550,000, the return will be $\frac{USD\ 550,000 - USD\ 500,000}{USD\ 500,000} = 10.0\%$
- (d) Illustration 2: If a portfolio is funded with USD 500,000, with a withdrawal of USD 200,000 mid period, and ends the challenge with USD 350,000, the return will be $\frac{USD\ 350,000 - USD\ 500,000 + USD\ 200,000}{USD\ 500,000} = 10.0\%$
- (e) Illustration 3: If a portfolio is funded with USD 500,000, with a withdrawal of USD 200,000 mid period, and a subsequent top-up of USD 100,000, and ends the challenge with USD 450,000, the return will be $\frac{USD\ 450,000 - USD\ 500,000 + USD\ 200,000 - USD\ 100,000}{USD\ 500,000} = 10.0\%$.
- (f) After initial withdrawal(s), subsequent top-ups are allowed if the total portfolio funding does not exceed the initial portfolio value. As an illustration, if a portfolio is funded with USD 500,000, with a total withdrawal amount of USD 200,000 till-date, customer can top up to the total withdrawal amount equivalent of USD 200,000 at any point in time. Customer will be disqualified from the Challenge if at any point of time during the Challenge period, the total top-up amount exceeds that of the withdrawal(s).
- (g) The NAVs of the portfolios are determined using the End-of-Day (“EOD”) mark-to-market prices and exchange rates that are determined by DBS, which may or may not be the same as those available from other data providers. DBS has a defined and established set of procedures for determining the EOD prices and exchange rates in our systems.
- (h) For the purpose of return calculation of DBS CIO Barbell Portfolio, the value of “DBS CIO Barbell Strategy Index USD” index is used. DBS CIO Barbell Portfolio’s return is calculated by taking the difference between the Final Index Value (Index Value_{EOP}, the index value as of EOP) and the Initial Index Value (Index Value_{SOP}, the index value as of SOP), divided by the Initial Index Value (Index Value_{SOP}). I.e., $\frac{Index\ Value_{EOP} - Index\ Value_{SOP}}{Index\ Value_{SOP}} \times 100\%$. For avoidance of doubt, the Bloomberg ticker of the “DBS CIO Barbell Strategy Index USD” index is “DBSCIOB”, which at the close of 30 June 2020, has a value of 107.8764.
- (i) Returns of all portfolios, including that of DBS CIO Barbell Portfolio, will be calculated in USD terms.
- (j) All transaction costs will reduce a portfolio’s NAV and hence will have negative impact on portfolio return.
- (k) The final outperformance (or under-performance) against DBS CIO Barbell Portfolio is calculated by subtracting DBS CIO Barbell Portfolio’s return from that of the portfolio. As an illustration, if the return of DBS CIO Barbell Portfolio is 5.5% over the same period, the portfolio illustrated in #1 above will have a 10.0% - 5.5% = 4.5% out-performance over DBS CIO Barbell Portfolio.

18. DBS’s decision on all matters relating to the Challenge, including the Grand Prize Winner, shall be final and binding on all parties. No correspondence or claims on any matter concerning the Challenge will be entertained.

19. DBS reserves the right to select an alternative eligible DBS card for crediting of DBS Points or DBS$ if the Relevant Account provided is erroneous. If the DBS card is held by a supplementary cardmember, these points or $ will be accumulated in the Principal Cardmember's account, and only the Principal Cardmember can redeem DBS Points or DBS$ for rewards
20. Customers who qualify Additional Rewards are entitled to receive the miles in the form of DBS Points or DBS$ (the "Reward") credited to the eligible Relevant Account 03 months after the "Challenge Result Announcement".
